These are Karel van Mander Het Schilderboeck, who essentially covers the previous century, and Arnold Houbraken De groote schouburgh der Nederlantsche konstschielders en schilderessen - "The Great Theatre of Dutch Painters", - Both followed, and indeed exceeded, Vasari in including a great number of short lives of artists - over in Houbraken's case - and both are considered generally accurate on factual matters. She would seem to fit the part in light of the fact that she dies for doing what she believes is right. Unpopular Opinion time Well, there actually appears to be a few of us who didn't like this, but the vast majority of my friends did, so it's probably just me. See also: Soulquarians.
